In November 2010, Porterbrook Leasing relocated to their brand new purpose built headquarters at The Point Office Village on Pride Park in Derby. Irongate was awarded the contract to supply and install all of the furniture for this new 15,000sqft building.

Simon Clark, Irongate's Furniture Specialist told Inside Out "relocating is a complex project which is why we started work on this project 12 months ago, in November 2009. The first step was to get the space planning correct. We worked in partnership with Porterbrook to design layouts that met their individual requirements and produced detailed floor plans and 3D visuals which helped them to visualise their new space and see what it would look like off the page".

Once the plans had been finalised, it was time to select the individual pieces of furniture to kit out two floors of office space including open plan offices, side offices, meeting rooms, boardrooms, reception and bistro/breakout areas.

Porterbrook's Project Manager, Karen Hayward said "I was more than happy with the level of service Irongate provided us on this complex, and at times stressful project. Simon's experience and knowledge was invaluable and having been provided with a demo suite of furniture for us to trial over a number of weeks at our old premises, meant I was 100% happy in our selection before we placed the final order. And despite giving them a tight deadline, all furniture and fittings were installed ahead of schedule".
